IN MEMORY: STEPHEN KENNEDY GATES

The University of North Carolina suffered a tragic loss when Stephen Gates was killed in a traffic accident on Oct. 4, 2003. Gates, 27, had served as the voice of the UNC baseball team for the past six years, calling the play-by-play action on all radio broadcasts. A 1998 graduate of Carolina, Gates also was the play-by-play voice for the UNC women's basketball team and was the sideline reporter for Tar Heel football broadcast.

"Stephen loved baseball and he loved Carolina baseball," said head coach Mike Fox. "He was a member of our 'team' in every respect. He was the 'baseball voice of the Tar Heels,' but most importantly he was our friend. We all miss Stephen but will certainly never forget him. He was the best."

A scholarship has been established in Gates' named at the UNC School of Journalism and Mass Communication. Contributions may be sent to: UNC School of Journalism and Mass Communication, c/o Stephen Kennedy Gates Scholarship Fund, Carroll Hall CB #3365, Chapel Hill, NC 27599-3365

Previewing the Tar Heels

GARRY BAKKER

Fresh off its first NCAA Regional victory since 1989, the University of North Carolina baseball team is poised to continue its rise toward the top of the Atlantic Coast Conference and the national scene in 2004. With 23 letterwinners back in the fold and the addition of the nation's top freshmen class according to Baseball America and Collegiate Baseball, sixth-year head coach Mike Fox and his staff hope to guide the Tar Heels to their first College World Series appearance in 15 years.

With the losses to the lineup of All-ACC performers Chad Prosser and Sean Farrell, who ended their Carolina careers ranked first and second in career hits, the Tar Heels will be built around pitching and defense this season.

"Without question, our team is going to be focused on pitching and defense to start the season," said Fox. "We've got to start on the mound because that's where most of our experience and depth returns. When you start with pitching, you better follow that up with good defense. We need to be good up the middle."

Carolina gets a great start up the middle with junior catcher Chris Iannetta and junior second baseman Greg Mangum, two of the Tar Heels' most experienced returnees. Fox will be forced to replace Prosser at short, while sophomore Blair Waggett and junior Chase Younts figure into the mix in centerfield.

STARTING PITCHING

On the mound, UNC returns Garry Bakker, Adam Kalkhof and Scott Manshack as probable starters. Highly-touted rookies Daniel Bard and Andrew Miller, both top draft choices in last summer's MLB draft, also figure to start.

"We return pretty much our entire pitching staff intact from last year except for Daniel Moore (a second-round pick of the San Diego Padres)," said Fox. "Certainly that's a huge exception because Daniel was an outstanding pitcher here for three years. We're going to miss his presence, but we have a great nucleus returning with five senior pitchers and several juniors like Garry Bakker that have pitched a great deal for us. Even our three sophomores last year had a lot of appearances. This is a staff that might be considered one of our most experienced in terms of innings and appearances returning from one year to the next."

Kalkhof earned Freshman All-America honors from Collegiate Baseball a year ago with a 7-2 record and a 4.26 ERA. He led the staff with 77 strikeouts and was named Rookie of the Year in the New England Collegiate Baseball League last summer. Manshack, who went 7-0 in 2002, was 4-3 last season. He was fourth on the team with 10 starts. Bakker was 6-3 for the second consecutive season in 2003 with a 4.32 ERA. He was third on the squad with 59 strikeouts and was an all-star in the Cape Cod League over the summer.

"Garry has been in that mix since he was a freshman," said Fox. "He's pitched in some really big games and had some outstanding outings for us. He's our hardest worker and he may be the best athlete on the team."

The freshmen tandem of Bard and Miller rounds out the projected Tar Heel starters. Miller (Gainesville, Fla.) was a third-round pick by Tampa Bay, while Bard (Charlotte, N.C.) was chosen in the 20th round by the New York Yankees. Bard also gained valuable experience last summer with the U.S. Junior National Team.

"Daniel and Andrew are highly-touted and have great arms, but they are still freshmen," said Fox. "They both showed the realm of the good and the bad this fall. They had some good outings and some not-so-great ones, which is very typical of young guys trying to feel their way through Division I baseball."

Despite the youth of Bard and Miller, Fox expects to depend on the experience of his staff throughout much of the season.

"There is not a guy that we're going to run out there among our seniors, juniors and sophomores that has not been a big ACC game or an NCAA Regional or a tough situation," said Fox. "That's a good thing, and you throw in our freshmen that we feel really good about, and we might have the most depth and best arms that we've had here in awhile."

RELIEF PITCHING

Fox and pitching coach Roger Williams also return a great amount of depth in the bullpen, including seniors Whitley Benson, Kevin Brower, Michael Gross and Scott Senatore.

Benson has been a workhorse over his first three years in Chapel Hill and is tied for fifth in program history with 85 appearances. He made 31 appearances a year ago and posted career-bests of a 3.55 ERA and four saves. Brower is back after a team-best 33 appearances a year ago, while Senatore, who led the staff with a 2.81 ERA, checked in with 32. Brower was 4-4 with a 4.05 ERA. Additionally, Gross made 16 appearances last season.

Sophomores Matt Danford and Jonathan Hovis also gained a great deal of experience last season and should add even more depth. Danford was 3-1 with a 3.47 ERA as a rookie last season. He was fourth on the team with 24 appearances and earned a spot on the all-tournament team at the NCAA Starkville Regional. Hovis worked in 19 games and went 2-1 on the season.

"We have a pretty good mix of players – right- and left-handers – back this year," said Fox. "We have a lot of experience in the bullpen."

Freshman Robert Woodard (Charlotte, N.C.) has also impressed this fall. According to Fox, he has outstanding control. Woodard, Benson and Danford are in the mix to fill the role of closer this season.

Sophomore Bryan Phillips made the biggest jump this fall, while junior Bo Dickerson and freshman Rob Wooten (Pikeville, N.C.) are coming off injuries and may be limited in the amount they can pitch.

CATCHER

CHRIS IANNETTA

Junior Chris Iannetta returns behind the plate as one of the Tar Heels most veteran position players. A year ago, he batted .319 with eight home runs and 55 RBI. Defensively, he committed just five errors in 2003.

"Chris Iannetta is one of our better offensive and defensive players," said Fox. "He caught a lot his first two years here and he's one of our most experienced position players back. Hopefully he'll continue to improve offensively like he did when making the jump between sophomore and junior year."

Versatile junior Justin Webb, who can play four positions, and classmate Mark Griffin will back up Iannetta.

Freshman Trent Kline was a highly-touted prep catcher but underwent shoulder surgery in the fall, and his status for the season is undetermined.

FIRST BASE

According to Fox, freshman Brack Massey (Greenville, N.C.) is in the running for the job at first base, which was considered "up in the air" entering the fall.

"Brack Massey really swung the bat well this fall, and we think he has the capability to be a good hitter at this level," said Fox. Massey was an all-state performer as a senior.

When he's not behind the plate, junior Chris Iannetta will play first base, as could senior Sammy Hewitt when not at third base.

SECOND BASE
